COUNCIL FAVORS BETTER BUILDING

Last Monday evening a regular meeting of the City Council was held, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding. Councilman A. J. Bodien was back on the job again, having recuperated from a nose and throat operation which he underwent on November 15.

The ordinance committee reported that the ordinance which would cause a better class of buildings to be erected on both sides of Mission street, between the county line and Vista Grande avenue, will be ready for first reading at the next meeting of the Council.

A report was made by the city engineer that the street work of the new district in the vicinity of School street is progressing nicely, and will be completed within the next two weeks.

The park committee reported that the playground apparatus recently installed in the park has met with the greatest approval and appreciation of the children.

Julius Twesten, recently appointed as Councilman, was formally installed, taking the place of Councilman T. P. Moran, who resigned on account of his business connections making it necessary for him to reside in Oakland. Citizens present at the meeting announced that they were sorry to lose the services of Councilman Moran, and wished Councilman Julius Twesten success in his new venture.

The monthly bills were read and ordered paid.

JEFFERSON STARS HAVE REORGANIZED

The Jefferson All Stars baseball team is going to resume activities again.

Vic Barskey, manager, has collected five of last year's team, together with some new stars. Those that will return are Charles Aiello, Morris Plansky, Lawrence Kennedy, Ray Doyle and Lloyd Lagomarsino.

Some of the players that are new to an All Star lineup are not strange to Daly City fans. They are Fred Strand, catcher; Joe Drucker, shortstop, and Pat Sloan, first base. The new players that are coming from St. Ignatius college are Jack Gaddy, a hard-hitting outfielder and pitcher, and Tom Preston, pitcher.

A game has not been scheduled for Sunday at the time of this writing. The reason is that Barskey wants to sign up a good team, so the boys will have a fast contest on hand.

FATALLY INJURED IN STREET CAR ACCIDENT

Despite efforts of Mr. R. C. MacArthur, who submitted to blood transfusion in the hope of saving her life, Mrs. Mary Covell, sister of Mrs. R. C. MacArthur, died Tuesday at the San Francisco hospital. Mrs. Covell, a resident of Ookland, was on her way to visit friends in San Francisco when she was injured at Geary street and Forty-first avenue. At that point she alighted from the street car, walked behind it, and was struck down by another car going in the opposite direction.

LAST SCHOOL DANCE OF YEAR TO BE HELD ON DECEMBER 13

Hoping to make the last school dance of the year the liveliest and best, juniors of Jefferson Union high school are working hard on their Christmas Frolic, to be held at the high school auditorium next Friday night, December 13.

Admission of non-students may be secured through invitations, which may be obtained from any member of the student body. The tax for the affair is 50 cents.

The committee in charge has planned many surprises, including a real Santa Claus, and worthwhile gifts. Other arrangements are being kept secret, but no effort will be spared to make this the most attractive and enjoyable dance ever given at the high school.

Proceeds from the dance will be used by the juniors to honor the graduating class at an annual farewell banquet.

MOOSE ARE MAKING PLANS FOR DANCE

The members of South San Francisco Lodge No. 832, Loyal Order of Moose, are making preparations for their big benefit dance, which the committee announces will be held on Saturday evening, December 21. South San Francisco has a live lodge, a number of Daly City and Colma residents being members, and it is expected that their dance on December 21 will draw a large crowd from Daly City and Colma, as well as other peninsula cities. A live committee has charge of the affair, and a splendid time is promised.

GENERAL PERSHING BAZAAR A SUCCESS

The annual bazaar given by the General Pershing Parent-Teachers' Association was exceptionally well attended this year, and in every way was a triumph. The luncheon, which was under the able supervision of Mrs. Landini, was especially well patronized, and every one was highly satisfied with the good fare provided.

There was beautiful hand sewed work which reflected great credit on the ladies in charge of that booth, and proved to be an attraction to all who patronized the bazaar. All the other booths did big business, not excluding the fish pond, which was surely swamped by the children, also the candy, toys, and canned goods. The Tea Garden was most attractive, the ladies being dressed in colorful Japanese costumes, Mrs. Douglas being in charge.

Great credit is due Mrs. Hassett, principal of the school, and her teachers, for the splendid entertainment provided by the children at night, which was voted by every one as being most amusing and clever.

Amongst those who were present that the members were pleased to have with them were Rev. Howard D. Chandler and Mrs. Chandler, Mr. Savage, and Rev. Father Donohoe.

The P. T. A. wishes to take this oportunity of expressinig appreciation to the various tradespeople in the district for their co-operation and assistance in displaying the posters, etc.

The president, Mrs. Fletcher, wishes to thank all the ladies who so ably assisted her in the preparations for this bazaar, the results of their efforts having indeed proved most gratifying.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE EXTEND YOU A WELCOME

"Two Good Reasons for Not Coming to B. P. Y. U. Both Unsound."

1. I can not take part, so I am not wanted.
2. I am not a Baptist.

If you believe any of these you have a pleasant surprise awaiting you.

If you can't take part, you are all the more valuable to the Union, because it will give the members the privilege of showing and leading you to the Christian life.

If you are not a Baptist nor any other church member, you can for the present become an associate member, developing into an active member as time passes, and you fulfill the requirements. You can also become a member of the church.

The B. Y. P. U. of Calvary Baptist church, 5724 Mission street, wants you to come this Sunday at 7 p. m. to the meeting. I. L. S.

TALKING PICTURE SET MAKES HIT WITH THEATRE OWNERS

The talking picture set at the Daly City Theatre has presented such excellent tonal quality that it is becoming the talk of Northern California, and many exhibitors over the northern part of the state are frequently calling upon the management for a demonstration in view of equipment of a like nature for their own theatres.

This equipment, known as the Colorart Syncratone, is the latest talking picture set on the market, there being only two on the Pacific Coast at the present time, one in Los Angeles and the other here in Daly City. It plays both Vitaphone and the Movietone pictures with equal results, giving the patron a clear-cut presentation of voice and sound at all times, with the elimination of disagreeable booms and scratches.

DRUIDS' WHIST PROVES A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

A very successful whist party was given by the Druids on Monday evening at Masonic Hall, under the chairmanship of Mrs. V. Lombard, who so ably managed the affair. Happy folks and comfortable surroundings make the Druids' affairs so delightful.

Now, Who Awakened Him?

THANKSGIVING

There is a grace of gratitude in Life,
A pausing for a moment in the strife,
To lift the heart and eyes to Him on high,
And in a halting, humble way, to try
And thank Him for the plenteous blessing shower
He sends upon us every day and hour.
He who has not this grace can scarcely say,
Within his heart, he loves Thanksgiving Day:
But he who feels a welling in his breast
Of joy and gladness that he has been blest,
Will let his gratitude not waste away,
But make his life one long Thanksgiving Day.—Flash.

We are thankful for life itself. It may be a lonely life; it may be a tragic one; it may be that we could change it if we would. Again, we may be the objects of some unaccountable circumstance. What ever it is, there's life, and "Where there is life, there is hope." We are thankful for the grains of sand that make our lovely beaches. We are thankful for the great trees that seem to reach the grand and beautiful sky, that graces the golden sun, whose rays give forth the life and light and health to all who would enjoy it. We are thankful for the flowers that bring a message of joy or sympathy. We are thankful for the opportunity to work, or giving service. We are thankful for the kind words of those who are dear to us. We are thankful for the clear, cool water that we drink, and for the food, be it just a crust, that we enjoy. We are thankful for the friendships that have proven the test. But greatest of all, we are thankful to Our Heavenly Father for His help, His guidance, His trust in us, for giving to us all these blessings. And may He continue to see fit to bless the people and this glorious country with peace and prosperity, that the world may feel its influence and be thankful for this, America's Thanksgiving Day.

THE EAGLES NEST

The regular weekly meeting of the Fraternal Order of Eagles was held on Thursday evening, with a good attendance.

Three aplications for membership were submitted and approved.

Brothers Pava, Espenoza, A. Ferrara, Elmer Fahey and Louiga were reported on the sick list.

The initiation listed for December 12 has been postponed until January 1. This should not deter your signing up that friend of yours.

Because of the recent resignation of Brother Kennedy as vice-president, Brother B. G. Kost was nominated and elected unanimously. Bother Kost was Chaplain, and the vacated office will be filled at the next meeting.

Mayor Smith gave a talk on the requirements for application for the old age pension, which begins to operate on January 1, 1930. This legislation was sponsored by the Eagles.

THE ASSOCIATED AERIES OF SAN MATEO COUNTY

A meeting of all the Aeries in the county was held in Redwood City on Friday evening. To those who have not been acquainted with this movement, it is announced that the purposes of this organization are the fraternal, social and mutual co-operation of evey Eagle in the county. It has proven to be a very active and progressive organization and promises to be a vital issue both in fraternal and civic affairs. The Aeries in the county represent about 2,000 members and meetings are held in each town.

The first social affair will be a dance at San Mateo on Saturday, November 30, at the Masonic Hall. This is a public affair and an invitation is extended to all. A committee of Daly City Eagles will be on hand to assure every one a good time.

During the meeting several San Jose Aerie members spoke on the wonderful work of the association, and expressed a desire to enter the association. An invitation was extended to them, and a good will committee of five was appointed to attend San Jose's meetings. The committee is composed of Brothers Schattler and Sharkey of Redwood City, Bogel of San Mateo, Adams and Rodenberger of Daly City.

Brother Reynolds of Redwood City gave a condensed history of the Associated Aeries. He stated that it was founded in 1911, disbanded in 1918, reorganized in 1920, disbanding in 1924, to be reorganized in 1929. A very significant fact is that Daly City was the father of the idea and has been instrumental in reorganizing it each time.

About twenty Daly City members attended the meeting. The next meeting will be held in Daly City on December 12.

VETERAN LOCKED IN FREIGHT CAR

Trapped in a Southern Pacific freight car without food or water for twenty-one days, Roy Johnson, aged 37, a World war veteran, is at the Community hospital, where physicians express the belief that he will recover.

Low groans coming from the car at Belmont led to the release of Johnson, who declared he had gone to sleep in the car while it was standing on a siding in Chicago. For days, in the complete darkness of his prison, Johnson said he fought for his release. He declared he searched the floor and the walls for any point of attack which might show the way to freedom, after wrestling in vain with the heavy door which had been closed and bolted from the outside. Without tools of any kind, he attempted to loosen a bolt or other piece of metal with which he could force the door. His calls for help and his pounding against the door went unanswered.

By the rumble inside his prison, Johnson knew the car had been attached to a train and at every stop he renewed his efforts to attract attention to his plight. He was partially crazed from lack of water and is at present in danger of losing his mind, according to hospital reports.

GRAND JURY WILL BEGIN ACTIVE WORK

James V. Swift, foreman of the San Mateo county grand jury, has announced his selection of committees. The first official meeting of the grand jury was held Tuesday at the court house in Redwood City, at which time Swift named the following committees: Finance committee, James V. Swift, chairman; Millicent Gish, Annie Agrotti, James G. Hamilton, Manuel P. Dutra; Hospital committee, James V. Swift, chairman; Annie T. Harrison, Carl Hultberg, Olga Ottoboni, James G. Hamilton.

The first work of the new grand jury was to make an official inspection of the Community hospital at Beresford. Bids were received from five auditing firms for the contract of auditing the county's books for the year. The lowest bid submitted was that of Hood & Strong, of San Francisco.

SEVEN MILLION FOR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Nearly seven million dollars will be made available to 175,000 Californians for their Christmas shopping by the Bank of Italy tomorrow.

This sum represents the total savings, set aside each week over a period of fifty weeks, by members of the bank's Christmas Club for the express purpose of financing their holiday shoping. Checks are being mailed today.

The Bank of Italy has the largest club of this kind in the United States, its Christmas deposits amounting to 5 per cent of the combined total savings of all clubs in the country.

Distribution of this holiday money is always welcome news to merchants throughout California. It is usually the signal for the start of holiday shopping and since its inception, five years ago, it has been found to act as a stimulus to early buying, a leveling out of holiday shopping over a period of weeks and a consequent lessening of the last minute rush.

In order to encourage the use of Christmas Club funds for Christmas purposes, the money accumulated is sent by check to each depositor, rather than require the individuals to call at the bank. This removes every possible obstacle to the employment of the entire amount in the seasonal channels of trade. Many stores feature the fact that they accept the Christmas Club checks as cash, thus insuring the maximum convenience for the shoppers.

MEETING OF JEFFERSON P. T. A.

The Parent-Teachers' Association of Jefferson Union high school met in the auditorium of the high school on Thursday evening, November 21, at o'clock.

A sketch called "Sardines" was presented by the dramatic club of the Job's Daughters, and was greatly enjoyed.

Mr. John Miller, of Daly City, gave a short talk on the water situation.

The P. T. A. will hold a whist at Eagles Hall on Wednesday evening, December 4. Everyone invited, and a good time assured all.

FROLIC AND BALL

Associated Aeries, F. O. E., of San Mateo county will give their first annual ball on Saturday, November 30, at Masonic Temple, San Mateo. Eagles and their friends will be there, to dance to the music by Newell F. Sharkeys' orchestra. Admission $1. Ladies complimentary.

SPUR TRACK CASE IN FEDERAL COURT

The "orphan" spur track controversy which broke out last March when the Southern Pacific threw a 1,400-foot track across the right of way in San Mateo of the Bayshore boulevard and the proposed Western Pacific extension to Redwood City, is finally in the hands of the Federal courts.

Former United States Circuit Judge William H. Hunt, who acted as the special master in the case, heard the last testimony last Monday in the application of the Western Pacific for a permanent injunction preventing completion of the track. Judge Hunt will formulate his decision and pass it on the United States Judge Frank Kerrigan as his recommendation.

Construction work meanwhile is being held up by a restraining order obtained by the Western Pacific immediately after the work had been discovered.

The Western Pacific claimed that the Southern Pacific built the spur track secretly to obtain priority of right in its fight with the Western Pacific. It was also claimed that the spur was in reality an extension into new territory, and should have the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commisison before it was undertaken.

Menwhile another phase of the "orphan" spur controversy is before the State Railroad Commission awaiting decision. The commission investigated the controversy between the Southern Pacific and the State Highway Commission as to construction of a grade separation. This phase has been submitted and now awaits decision.

COUNTY FIRES CAUSE CONSIDERABLE LOSS

Fires in San Mateo county were practically extinguished the first of the week after having for several days swept through canyons and over the ridges of the San Morena range for almost the entire length of the county. Every section was periled to some extent by the disastrous fire, the worst in the history of the county, and in one community more than a score of homes were razed.

The community suffering the most was Montara. Here more than twenty homes were burned. The town was swept by the fire spreading in the brush and grass from the brushy slopes immediately in the rear of the town, which was burned last Friday. The water supply of the town was cut off by the burning of a trestle which carried water from a reservoir in the mountains into the town. Handicapped by the lack of water, the residents of the town fought with sacks to beat out the fire, which threatened for some time the whole town.

MILLS FIELD LEASE GIVEN EXTENSION

San Francisco's investment in Mills Field airport, near San Bruno, will be protected by a two year extension of the present lease, which expires early next year, even though the purchase of the property is not consummated at once, it is announced.

The San Francisco board of supervisors last Monday acted unanimously to renew the city's lease for two years. The renewal will be unnecessary if the site is purchased immediately, however.

Appointment of Bartlett Stevens, acting superintendent of the field, as permanent superintendent at a salary of $300 per month was delayed when the airport committee asked to have the matter referred back to the committee.

HEALTH SEAL LETTERS SHOULD BRING FUNDS

More than 16,000 communications are being sent this week to San Mateo county residents, with health seals, which will be bought to take care of the maintenance of San Mateo Preventorium. Volunteer workers are filling the envelopes at the home of the Preventorium. Mrs. Harry S. Dana, chairman of the San Mateo county seal sale, states in the communication that the program for the coming year is to include the care of girls as well as boys.

CLAIMS AMUSEMENT RESORT IS RESPONSIBLE FOR INJURY

Claiming that she will have a permanent scar on her left cheek as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident on an amusement device near San Bruno on October 6, Virginia Williams has filed suit in the Superior Court in Redwood City to collect $20,000 from J. Peterson and others, owners of the resort. The device is driven over in an automobile. It is constructed of wood and is built to resemble a road with hills and curves.

FOURTTEN FEDERAL MEN ARE KILLED IN YEAR'S FOREST FIRES

Fourteen employees of the United States Forest Service lost their lives this year in the grim war that has raged between man and fire in the national forests, according to report of Major R. Y. Stewart, chief forester at Washington, D. C. Loss of life of Forest Service personnal on fires was heavier in 1929 than in any year since the disastrous conflagrations of 1910. The largest number of deaths due to forest fires occurred in the North Pacific District (Oregon and Washington), where six Forest Service employees lost their lives. The Northern District (Montana and Idaho) has reported four deaths and the California and Eastern Districts two each.

With one exception, all of these who died as a result of fires on the National Forests were temporary employees of the Forest Service patrolmen, guards or members of fire-fighting crews. One permanent employee, Douglas C. Ingram, assistant in range management in the District office at Portland, Oregon, met his death on the Camas Creek fire, Chelan National Forest, on August 13. Ernani St. Luise, temporary employee from Chelan, Wash., was with Ingram and lost his life at the same time. Ingram was acting as fire camp organizer on the Chelan National Forest, and had called a crew off the line, as he considered the danger too great for the men to remain where they were. As the fire later "blew up" in that section, his action undoubtly saved the lives of this crew. Having sent the men back to camp, Ingram and St. Luise set off to reconnoiter the fire. All evidence indicates that they were cut off by the fire and were suffocated.

A day or two earlier, Ingram had shown exceptional coolness in leading crew of about a dozen men out of a fire trap to safety. He took the men into a small clearing and told stories and whittled to get them out of their panicky condition, and then had them lie flat while the fire passed over them. The testimony is unanimous that if it had not been for Ingram's coolness the crew would have tried to rush through the fire and would certainly have been lost.

Other Forest Service employees whose lives were lost as a result of fire activties during the year were: Norman D. Keen, forest guard, Santa Barbara forest, California; Richard Gell, fire fighter, Trinity forest, California; J. F. Marten, fire fighter on the Chelan forest, Washington; W. P. Makieff, fire fighter, Colville forest, Oregon; Fred E. Gibson, co-operator, Mt. Hood forest, Oregon; Franz Frank, laborer, Rainier forest, Washington; Joe Aiken, laborer, Pend Oreille forest, Idaho; Archie White, fire fighter, Selway forest, Idaho; Lester Rudd, fire fighter, Flathead forest Montana; Tom Godman, fire fighter, Bitterroot forest, Montana; Robert Keyes and Richard Cornett, fire fighters, Unaka forest, Virginia-Tennessee.

RIGHT OF WAY

Yield to the car on the right!"

This, in brief, is the rule when driving on the streets and highways of California, announces Mrs. Fred Swehla, chairman Safety Conference of the California State Chamber of Commerce, representing Daly iCty, in Commerce, representing Daly City, in a broadcast to all local safety committees in California, asking their co-operation in the November safety lesson on the right of way at intersections.

"Because you squeeze into an intersection a little ahead of a car coming on your right," continued Mrs. Swehla, "it does not follow that you have the right of way. Where you are in the intersection is not the controlling factor. It is whether there will be a collision if both you and the fellow on the right proceed. In this situation, you should yield. Otherwise you violate the rule which may cause a serious accident with arrest and civil liability as additional results.

"The right of way lesson to all members is part of the year-around campaign to reduce the great toll of life on the streets and highways of California as a result of automobile accidents."

MANY ARE ARRESTED FOR GLARING LIGHTS

Early reports received from all parts of the state by the California Highway Patrol indicated today that more than 60,000 California motorists had fallen into the net set a few weeks ago when the patrol launched its campaign against glaring headlights.

To date, Eugene W. Biscailuz, superintendent of the patrol, has received a record of 12,730 actual arrests by the state officers for violations of headlight provisions, while approximately 23,000 other motorists were stopped by the patrolmen, were allowed to proceed after making a satisfactory arrangement for the immediate adjustment of their lights.

The figures do not include thousands of others who have been stopped or arrested by municipal and county officers, enlisted in the campaign by Biscailuz.

A heavy percentage of those arrested paid fines, the records show. The new law permits the immediate arrest of any person who refuses to submit his lights to a screen test when demand is made by an officer.

Records compiled to date show 449 have been arrested in San Mateo county by members of the patrol. New records are pouring in daily at headquarters of the patrol and these figures will be changed materially in a short time.

Biscailuz said the drive against glaring lights would be continued "until the nuisance has been abated permanently."

The railway supervisor of a Western line received the following note from one of his foremen:

TWO KINDS OF PESTS ON THE HIGHWAY

The "buggy rider" and the "expert driver" are two banes of motoring and contribute in a large measure to delays and accidents on our highways, according to the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association, which comments as follows:

"Two road pests, each of whom scores 100 per cent as a double-barreled, aitogether-awful weariness of the flesh, are found on the highways.

"One is the 'buggy rider,' the fellow who inserts a dilapidated lot of junk called a car into a stream of fast moving traffic and, ambling along at his top speed, which is from fifteen to twenty miles an hour, slows up the whole line, subjecting everybody in it to inconvenience and possible injury from colliding.

"The other is the 'expert driver,' who thinks he can handle a car so well that he does not have to observe the precautions taken by ordinary mortals. He ducks in and out, nicks a fender here, shaves a bumper there—and is as certain in the long run to meet or cause disaster as the sun is to rise tomorrow."

THANKSGIVING DAY

The first Thanksgiving day observed in America was that proclaimed by Governor Bradford of Plymouth colony in 1621, the year following the landing of the Pilgrims. During colonial days similar observances were held on various occasions.

President Washington by proclamation set November 26, 1789, as a day of general thanksgiving, but during the early history of the Republic such observances were irregular, and the several states generally set their own dates for holding them.

It was not until 1864, und[illegible] dent Lincoln, that [illegible] in Novemb[illegible] Thank[illegible] U[illegible] uniform annual date about 1840. Each year she wrote to all state governors, asking that they name the last Thursday in November, and gradually they fell in with her idea.

On the Pilgrim's first Thanksgiving day wild turkey formed the chief constituent of the feast, and ever since turkey has been inseparably associated with the day's observance.

BRIGHT BOY PROBLEM

We hear a good deal about the necessity for special attention to the dull child, and every aid which may be given these unfortunates ought to be given. But a lot of bright boys need some thought and practical assistance, too.

Education of the masses to a certain common level is to be desired, but unless the boy who shows exceptional talent can be given special opportunities to develop his latent powers, not only he, but the world at large, is the loser.

Thousands of mediocre boys go through college with little benefit to themselves or to society, while other thousands who have great gifts are denied the privilege, through lack of means.

That any boy with exceptional talent for creative work, scientific research or leadership should lack the opportunity to make the most of that talent is a tragedy. Upon such boys and their proper training depends the progress of the world. The same is true of especially talented girls.

When our civilization is a little further advanced, means will be provided that our brightest minds shall have every opportunity for the highest development. Such means should be provided now.

SAVINGS AND AUTOS

Statistics are not very entertaining, [illegible]ule, but a comparison of how [illegible] of different sections of the [illegible] save and spend is rather in[illegible]g.

[illegible] on figures compiled by the [illegible]ent of Commerce, a tabula[illegible] been made of the proportion[illegible]nts represented by savings [illegible] and automobiles owned in [illegible]ctions of the United States. [illegible]own that the New England [illegible]e 16.56 per cent of the [illegible]t only 6.07 per cent of the [illegible] of the country; Middle [illegible]tes, 35.71 per cent of the [illegible] 25.25 per cent of the [illegible]; West North Central [illegible] and 16.51; South Atlantic, [illegible], East South Central, 2.30 [illegible] West South Central, 1.91 [illegible] Mountain, 1.55 and 3.53; [illegible]22 and 10.71.

[illegible]ures appear to indicate the [illegible]riftness of the East, as [illegible] with the West and South. [illegible]one section or another is [illegible]ecause of the tendency to [illegible]end is difficult to determine. [illegible]s contemplate a savings ac[illegible]h great satisfaction; others [illegible]he old gasoline buggy and [illegible]e to the winds. It all de[illegible]pon one's point of view.

NO LACK OF WORDS

[illegible] often do we find difficulty in [illegible]g of just the right word to [illegible] a certain idea? Even the [illegible]t writers must often stop to [illegible]their words in order to hit [illegible]e most appropriate one, while [illegible]eakers can observe all the [illegible] of expression without writing [illegible]ir speeches and memorizing [illegible]forehand.

[illegible] difficulties are not due to [illegible]k of words in the English [illegible]e, however. Possibly it may [illegible]sult of our having too many [illegible]se from. The latest un[illegible]d dictionaries contain more [illegible]0,000 words, and the list is [illegible]ng constantly.

Webster's first dictionary, [illegible]d in 1828, contained only [illegible],000 words. The edition of [illegible]cluded 114,000, and that of [illegible]ut 175,000, as compared with [illegible]000 recognized words of to-

A leading lexicographer estimates that the educated person of fair ability understands on an average about 50,000 words, but uses only a small part of that number in either speaking or writing. The mass of the people know and use less than 8,000 words out of the 400,000 available.

An interesting experiment is to inspect a few pages of an unabridged directory and count how many words out of a hundred you are really familiar with, both as to spelling and meaning. Try it.

UNIVERSAL DRAFT

Government authorities and various patriotic organizations have been considering the advisability of a universal draft law, whereby capital, material and labor, as well as fighting men, may be pressed into service in the event of war.

The grave injustice of compelling the able-bodied men of the nation to serve on the battlefied for a dollar a day, while other citizens grow rich through excessive war profits, has been demonstrated to every right thinking person.

In other words, it should be so that no person can possibly make money out of war. And when there is no money to be made out of war, there will be less war.

We trust that we may never have to engage in another armed conflict, but if this can not be avoided, then everyone should share the hardships and the losses which war brings.

The proposed plan for drafting all the resources of the nation for its defense should have the hearty support of all citizens.

We are not in favor of those schools for salesmen. They sell us too much stuff now.

THE PROBLEM OF YOUTH

From the earliest times it appears that the problem of directing young folks in the proper way has engaged the serious attention of reformers and uplifters—and busybodies.

A book on etiquette published in 1850 gravely warns young women of the perils of the waltz and declares that "unmarried laides should refrain from the waltz altogether, in public and in private." It is assumed that married ladies were supposed to be immune to its demoralizing effects.

Every once in a while some one digs up an old newspaper or magazine containing an article which throws light on this tendency to worry about the young people of the past. The boys and girls of the present generation are likewise causing consternation among some of the self-apointed guardians of morality.

But the youngsters of today, in spite of their seeming frivolity, are the sanest, cleanest and most promising crop of future citizens the world has ever seen.

Whatever their failings, they are not hypocrites—and that can not be said for most of their critics.

EARLIEST KNOWN MEN

Recent discussion concerning the evolution of man has awakened an increased and growing interest in our early ancestors. While the remains of several primitive specimens have been unearthed in comparatively recent years, the search for additional types is going forward in many parts of the world.

What is believed to be the oldest remans of a man-like being so far brought to light are those of the Java man, discovered in 1891. This creature was ape-like, but had greater brain capacity and was of more human development than any known ape. He is known to scientists as Pithecanthropus erectus, and lived about five hundred thousand years ago.

Next is the Heidelberg man, whose jaw was ape-like, but with truly human teeth, found in Germany in 1907 under 79 feet of sand, mingled with the remains of now extinct mammals of 250,000 or more years ago.

The third is the Piltdown man, found in Sussex, England, in 1912, which also combines characteristics of both ape and man. This specimen probably lived 150,000 years ago.

Next in order is the Neanderthal race, represented by numerous remains, including complete skeletons, discovered in various parts of Europe and Asia since 1856. These were more ape-like than any race of men existing today, but were nevertheless fairly passable human beings, and lived about 50,000 to 100,000 years ago.

Finally, perhaps 50,000 or more years ago, there began to appear several races of true men, the Cro Magnon, Grimaldi, Aurignacian and Brunn races, of whom many well-preserved skeletons have been discovered during the last sixty years. The Cro Magnons were perhaps the finest physical specimens who ever lived, the men ranging from five feet ten and a half inches to six feet four and a half inches in height.

There are few subjects more fascinating than that of primitive man, and any serious-minded person will be well repaid for the time spent in studying it.

"Give me neither poverty nor riches," said the sage. But, being no sage, we should not protest against the riches.

CAMELS—

The phrase "I've Graduated to Camels" originated with a Camel smoker. It expresses the experience of millions who through Camels have learned to know real smoking pleasure.

As taste in smoking develops, it naturally leads toward better quality. New smokers may not be critical but when they once experience the true mildness and surpassing fragrance of the Camel blend, they realize that here is a real superiority. It is for smokers of such discernment that Camels are made . . . for them the choicest tobaccos are selected . . . and this quality is maintained for the millions who know genuine smoking pleasure.

GOVERNMENT COST HUNDRED MILLION

Cost of California's state government reached a new high record mark of $108,644,173.55 for the last fiscal year, according to a statement by Controller Ray L. Riley.

An increase of more than $18,000,000 in state expenses this year over last is noted by Controller Riley in his annual report.

"For the last five years," said Riley's statement, "this office has annually published cost of government tabulations for the information of the general public and governmental officers. It is a challenging fact that during this period—since the first analysis was made for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924—the annual cost of government in California has increased $44,859,822.

"This is a gain of 70 per cent in five years, an amazing rate of increase when set down in comparison with the increase in property valuations during the same period, or when computed as against population gains.

"For the year just ended, the increase is more than 20 per cent over the preceding year. That, also, commands attention, for it is the present that gives us most vital concern.

"The question all California citizens must face, dispassionately, without regard to partisan politics, is simply this: Can taxable property and the individual taxpayer carry the load?"

REDWOOD CITY SEEKS LOWER RATE ON JUICE

In the hope of obtaining a lower rate on electric power for Redwood City, legal representatives of that municipality have started an action before the State Railroad Commission against the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. The complaint charges that the company furnishes power measured on several different meters and has refused to combine it on one meter. An order asking that the power company be compelled to comply or else fix an equitable rate for the service is asked.

Fire Bug Gets Ten Years

W. E. Johnston, arrested and convicted more than a year ago for second degree arson, must serve ten years in San Quentin, according to the certificate of determining sentence received by County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese in Redwood City from the prison board of directors. Johnston was convicted of setting some fires at Belmont.

Her faith unshaken, Miss Sara Levett, of Waynesboro, Georgia, recently waited at the church for five hours for Eugene Marks, whom she was to marry. Then Marks appeared, soaking wet and without coat or shoes, and the ceremony was performed. The bridegroom had been detained by floods, which caused him to travel 150 miles by boat and motor, instead of the usual 27 miles between Augusta and Waynesboro.

Cheese eating in the United States is still in its infancy, according to a recent report. Americans eat only about four and one-third pounds per capita a year, while Swiss eat 23 pounds, French 13 pounds, Germans 9 pounds, and English 8 pounds. Cheese consumption in the states is growing, however, having increased nearly one pund per capita in the last ten years.

Ida Krehm, a Canadian school girl, was awarded a $1,600 musical scholarship in Chicago, where she competed with pianists from all over the United States.

RECORD YEAR OF MOTOR TOURIST TRAVEL INDICATED

Approximately one million motorists from other states will be the sum total of motor tourist travel to California during 1929, it is indicated in figures compiled by the California State Automobile Association. This estimate is based on a check of travel for September and October on the number of "foreign" cars passing through the border stations of the California State Department of Agriculture. There are twenty-three of these at points on the state line and while fourteen of these will be closed for the winter, there is expected to be no decrease in the usual winter season travel to California via the Southern gateways.

During the summer season just ended it is estimated that close to 250,000 motorists entered the northern and eastern gateways of California alone, a figure which does not take into account the summer travel to Northern and Central California from the south.

The number of cars from other states entering California during September was 28,762. In October 28,429 came in, making a total for the two months of 57,191 cars. A check of all cars crossing the border showed an average of 2.8 passengers to the car, which would mean that 160,134 persons entered the state in autos during these two months Taking this period as an average, it is found that the estimated total for the year is 960,804 persons.

It is expected from now until spring travel over the southern gateways will be increased.

Although many of the entrances to the state in the northeast will be closed during the winter, the roads from Oregon, carrying most of the Washington and Canada travel are open all year. Tourists from these localities come in large numbers into California for the colder months and these, with the easterners arriving over the southern routes, keep a steady stream of out-of-state travel all winter into California. It is anticipated that 1929 will establish a new record for motor tourists. All signs point to heavy winter travel so that 1930 will have a running start toward another banner tourist year.

Natural Gas CUTS FUEL COSTS

Straight natural gas is being served to all customers living in San Mateo, Santa Clara and Southern Alameda counties.

This natural gas contains over 1100 B.T.U's. or heat units per cubic foot. The manufactured gas heretofore served contained 550 B.T.U's. Customers are now receiving 2 times as much heat for their dollar.

So why not take advantage of this new fuel for heating your home, as well as for cooking and water heating?

Gas-fired heating, in addition to its low cost, is convenient, care-free and a clean type of heating.

The new fuel itself, burning in modern appliances, is absolutely safe. Large industries are turning to natural gas because it is safe, clean, quick and easy to control.

Your dealer or our House Heating Department will gladly give you particulars, without obligation, on the type of gas-heating equipment best suited to your needs. Write, phone, or call our local office and a representative will respond.

CANNERY FIRST TO ADOPT NATURAL GAS IN EAST BAY

The new cannery of the California Co-operative Producers in Oakland has the distinction of being the first industry in the East Bay region to be equipped with natural gas. It was connected on September 15 to the main gas line that brings natural gas from the Kettleman Hills to San Francisco and Oakland.

The cannery, which is situated at the foot of Ninth avenue near the inner harbor, is a new one in Oakland. It began operations last June, with oil burning equipment, but its management was quick to realize the advantages and economies of natural gas and changed from oil to gas as soon as the new fuel was available.

The plant employs 700 men and women and has a capacity of 240,000 two and a half pound cans daily. It puts up a wide variety of California fruits and vegetables and sends them forth to all the markets of the world.

The Desert Moon Mystery

SYNOPSIS

Sam Stanley, wealthy owner of the Desert Moon ranch, informs his housekeeper, Mary Magin, that his former wife's twin daughters, Danielle and Gabrielle, are coming to the ranch to live, their mother being dead and their father, Daniel Canneziano, who had been the cause of Sam's divorcing his wife, in the penitentiary. Sam's adopted boy, John, has grown to manhood, and a girl, Martha, weak-minded. Mrs. Ollie Ricker, Martha's nurse, Hubert Hand and Chadwick Caufield are the other members of the household. The girls arrive. John becomes engaged to Danielle. Gabrielle seeks to win John from her sister, and her actions when she receives a letter from France mystify Mrs. Magin. Sam learns Canneziano is soon to be released from the penitentiary. Mrs. Magin finds Gabrielle, choked to death, with tobacco ashes beside her. She realizes that the ashes must be from Sam's pipe, he being the only pipe smoker, and conceals them before calling the household. Caufield commits suicide. The coroner's verdict is murder and suicide. Sam finds a note left by Caufield confessing he killed Gabrielle, but the rancher proves he could not have done it, and the entire household is under suspicion. Danielle shows Mrs. Magin the letter Gabrielle had received from France. It is in code, typewritten.

"No, of course he didn't, dad. I'm giving you Bauermont's story, that's all. According to him Canneziano told him he had hidden the money here, all right; but he would not tell him where. He said it was safe, that no one could find it—not in a thousand years. That was all Bauermont could get out of him, except a promise to meet him, when he got out of prison, and come here with him to get the money.

"The letter Gaby got, a few days ago, was from this Bauermont. Danny could not read the code, but she has every reason to think that the copy Gaby read to her was genuine. In it he said that the whole thing, from start to finish, had been a put up job on Gaby. He and Canneziano had had no connection with the train robbery. The point of it was, that he had found another girl, was tired of Gaby, and wanted to ship her out of the way. Danny says the whole thing was an insult, from beginning to end; and that it seemed to have been written with no other motive than a desire to humiliate Gaby, twit her—laugh in her face."

"Sounds fishy to me," Sam mused. "Well, John, does that finish up the part of the story Danny couldn't tell?"

"I think so, dad."

"All right. Now, Danny, what did you mean, a few minutes ago, when you warned me to be careful, like you did?"

Danny Could Not Read the Code.

"I—" Danny stammered, "—wanted you to be careful about what you said, in anger."

"In other words, you wanted me to be careful about saying anything that would seem to implicate John?"

"John is not guilty."

"How do you know that?"

"I know it the same way that you all seem to know that Chad was not guilty. I know John."

"That's all right. But you can't know John's innocence like we know Chad's; because, from the time Gaby came downstairs, until we all set out to look for her, Chad was not out of my sight. He was at the piano. He walked to the barn with me. He stayed in the barn with me. He walked back to the house with me. He was with us all during supper."

"You," said Danny, "say that Chad was in the barn with you during all of that hour. I wonder whether Chad, if he were alive, could swear that you were in the barn with him, during all of that hour?"

"What do you mean by that, my girl?" Sam questioned.

Danny sat and stared at him, her eyes wide, her lips bitten tight; sat and looked as if she were frightened plumb out of her senses, and did not say one word.

"You meant something when you said that," Sam insisted. "Now what was it? Come, speak up. I don't aim to treat you mean, and you know I'm sorry for you, and feel for you in your trouble. But what is it you have on your mind?"

She sat there, still as a mouse; her big eyes growing bigger from fright.

John said gently, "If you have anything to say—please say it."

"You won't blame me?" she pleaded. "You won't blame me, afterward?"

"Could I blame you for telling what you think is the truth?"

"Hubert," she spoke suddenly, and very sharply, for her, "did you see Uncle Sam, all that time, in the barn? Could you see him, all the time, while you were milking the cows? He says he could not see you."

"No—" Hubert hesitated. "No—I guess I didn't see him, all the time. He was at one end of the barn, and I was at the other. But I heard him talking to Chad all the time. Sam was right there all the time, Danny. No getting away from that."

"But there is," she said. "You all seem to have forgotten it, but Chad was a mimic and a ventriloquist. He could have stayed there in the barn alone, and with no trouble at all, made you think that Uncle Sam was there, too, and that they were talking together."

I stopped breathing. I think the others stopped breathing. John spoke first.

"Four cows got milked. Chad couldn't milk. Never milked a cow."

"How do you know?" Danny said. "You know only that Chad said he could not milk. We all know that he was lazy. He was raised on a farm. He told me he was."

John said: "He told me that he was born and reared in Chicago."

"Shut up, John," Sam commanded. "Go on, Danny."

"That's all," she said. "Except, that if Chad could milk, that would have given Uncle Sam nearly all of that hour—"

"Dan!" John's voice sounded as if he were talking to one of his mean est broncos. "Stop it! Sitting here and accusing dad, with no evidence—nothing but a crazy, wild idea—"

"That is not true. I have evidence. I picked up Gaby's bag from the steps yesterday evening. Tobacco and pipe ashes were sticking to it. No one else on this place smokes a pipe. No one else, anywhere, drops his pipe whenever he is excited." She turned to me. "That is what I told you I dared not tell—" She hid her face in her hands.

Sam's pipe fell from his mouth.

CHAPTER X

A Part of the Past.

It seemed to me that, when Sam's pipe hit the floor, it made a noise like doom cracking. We all sat still as stones. I suppose it could not have been more than a minute, but it seemed a long time before John left Danny's side and went and picked up the pipe and handed it to Sam.

"It's all right, dad," he said.

"Not by a d—n sight, it's not all right," Sam came back to his senses vigorously. "But it is interesting—this thing. It is getting interesting anyway. Let me see— If I had got Chad to help—and I could have, by telling him it was some joke or other I had on hand—I could have sneaked out of the barn, met her and killed her, during that hour. When could I have got the body upstairs, though? That's the first missing link. My reason for killing her would be an other, but—"

"Say! See here, dad," John cut in.

"You shut up, son. We are waiting to hear the rest of what Danny has to say. Come, Danny, can you supply either of those missing links?"

"No," she said, and sighed. It was easy to see that she was plumb tuckered out. "No, of course I can't."

"Sam, you look here—" I began.

"You shut up, too, Mary," Sam said.

Mrs. Ricker spoke. She had her say out. Nobody, not even Sam would any more think of telling Mrs. Ricker to shut up, than they would think of telling any other dumb object, that suddenly started to talk to shut up.

"I think," Mrs. Ricker said, "that the girl herself probably killed her sister. If Sam's pipe ashes were on the bag, she put them there, afterwards, to make trouble for him."

Sam said, "Shucks!"

I thought John would be the first to speak. I was mistaken.

It was Danny herself who said "Make her talk, now. Uncle Sam Make her talk now, and give her reasons for saying such a cruel, wicked lying thing."

"Mrs. Ricker," Sam put the question very solemnly, "have you any reasons for making this accusation?"

"I have a feeling that she is guilty."

"This," Sam said, sternly, "is no time for feeling, nor for quibbling. You made a serious accusation—straight out. I want your reason, or reasons, for making it, and I want them just as straight."

"I have no reasons," Mrs. Ricker said. "That is why I suspect her."

"Ah-ah-ah! Women!" Sam said, and the way he said it, it was the blackest oath he had used that day.

"I think," I said, talking fast to keep Sam from shutting me up before I could get anything said, "that if, in suspicioning an innocent girl like Danny Mrs. Ricker is simply drawing on her woman's instinct, she'd better pass it up, for the present, and listen to some plain sexless sense.

"Gaby came downstairs at four. Danny called after her, right then; so Danny was in the house right then. Gaby went to the rabbit hutch and stopped long enough to give Martha the bracelet. Almost as soon as Martha was in the house with the bracelet, Danny was downstairs with us, cool, collected, and undisturbed. Now suppose that Gaby had come straight back into the house. I guess every one would agree that it would take her five minutes to get back upstairs. That would leave Danny not more than ten minutes to kill her, and to come downstairs, as I've said, collected and undisturbed. Come to think of it, Gaby could not have talked to Martha and got to the attic stairway in any five minutes. At the widest figuring, that leaves Danny about five minutes—"

As I had been fearing he would, Sam stopped me. "That's all right, too, Mary. But there is no need to draw so long a bow. No need to count minutes on Danny. The note in Gaby's bag fixes her innocence better than all the minutes on the clock could."

"No, it does not," Mrs. Ricker said. "Gaby knew that she had reason to fear an enemy. She probably found that out from the code letter. She may never have suspected that the enemy was her own sister."

"I wish I knew," Sam said, giving Mrs. Ricker a long look, "what you are getting at, Mrs. Ricker. I'd give that." Sam dangled out his right hand. "to know what any one of you was getting at. I think Danny would have to be pretty hard put to it, before she'd invent that story about my pipe ashes— See here, did any one else think they saw my pipe ashes around there?"

I imagined I could feel Hubert Hand's eyes boring into me. My face burned. I raised my eyes. Sam was staring straight at me.

"Mary," he said, "you found the body. Did you see pipe ashes there, then?"

My only excuse is, that it takes longer than a minute or two minutes to betray a person who has been your best friend for twenty-five years.

I said, "No."

"I am going to ask you to swear to that. Somebody get the Bible."

Nobody moved.

"You haven't made any of the others swear to anything," I said.

"I haven't caught any of the others in what I was sure was a direct and deliberate lie."

I felt weaker than filtered water. It is one thing to tell a lie, offhand into the free air. I haven't much use for a person who can't do that, when absolutely necessary. It is another thing to put your hand on the Good Book and swear to a lie. I knew that I could not do it.

"Martha," Sam said, "run and get the Bible for dad."

Martha seemed to be sound asleep. I did not notice anything queer about her appearance. Mrs Ricker must have noticed something queer. She jumped to her feet and dashed across the room to where Martha was lying. A shriek went piercing through the house, splintering the air into quivering bits of agony.

Every one has awakened from sleep, cold with the sweating terror of some hideous nightmare, but with only the vaguest impressions of its detail. So it is with me, and that nightmare hour. I can not reconstruct it. It remains, yet, in my mind as nothing but a horror of confusions.

Some of us made desperate attempts with restoratives.

I remember Sam's crying, with his face uncovered, like a child. I can hear him saying that he had given her a sleeping powder, had forced it upon her. I can hear, plainest of all, Mrs. Ricker's voice, with all the pent up passions of years breaking forth in torrents of heartbreak.

"My baby. My baby girl. My darling. Mothers' life. Mother's heart. Speak to mother. My lamb. My baby."

Her voice again, but cruel now, as she shrieks at Hubert Hand. "Stand there, you beast! Stand there, dry eyed and look at your dead daughter. The child you deserted. The child you ignored—"

I remember the feeling of the fresh air as I walked beside Sam, who was carrying Martha, out of the house. I think that it was John who explained to me that the doctor, who had left Telko, was going to meet us on the road, in order to save time. I remember Mrs. Ricker's scream, when—futile, unnecessary horror—Sam stumbled with his burden as he went to step into the sedan.

• • • • • •

The doctor, who was younger and more cruel than even a doctor has a right to be, said that Martha had died from a stoppage of the heart, undoubtedly induced by the strong drug in the sleeping powder that had been administered. In other words, Sam had killed her. He loved her. How deeply he had loved her, none of us had ever had sense enough to realize.

We had her funeral, and Chad's, two days later. All the people in the valley came. At first, I thought that they had come to honor the dead, and Sam. But, as I stood by the graves, and watched the faces about me, faces that held suspicion, horror, curiosity; sly faces, cruel faces, eager faces, I did not care to think why most of them had come.

There were only four of us around the table that evening. Mrs. Ricker had gone straight to her room, after the funeral. Danny, with no protest from Sam, had left the day before to take Gaby's body to San Francisco.

"You people," Hubert Hand spoke suddenly, to John and Sam and me, "have been awfully decent about not asking questions since the other afternoon."

"Never mind that, now, Hand," Sam answered. "I've known, since the first week you came to the ranch that there was, or had been, something between you two. You'd been her lover, I suppose. Well—men do. That's all. I reckon you deserted her, eh? And treated her like h—l, generally. And she found a refuge here. And, later, probably, heard that you were in trouble, and sent you a letter and told you to come here. Put you wise about the chess racket. Helped you. Made a refuge for you. Women do.

"I suppose she slipped poor Martha in, in place of the child she'd got from the orphanage—used the same papers. Well—to keep on repeating myself, mothers do. You and she have both lived straight and acted decent for the years you've been here. If the two of you want to keep on living in this h—l-hole, and keep on straight and acting decent, you'll get the same treatment from me you've always got."

Hubert Hand pushed back his chair, got up, and walked to the window. "By G—d, but you're a white man, Sam!" he said. "You're so d—n white that you make every one around you look yellow as sulphur by contrast.

"You've got it doped out right about Ollie Ricker and me. She was twelve years older than I was—I always felt like that was kind of an excuse for me. Guess not, though. She was a good enough girl until I came along, just out of prison, and as rotten as two years in prison can make a kid. That's pretty d—n rotten. She kept me pretty straight for a while. I ought to have married her, and I know it, before the kid was born. But she was so jealous that she made life a living hell for me. I—well, I wouldn't marry her.

"It was her fault that I got sent up the second time for forgery. She talked to a girl friend of hers, and the girl snitched. Up to that time, I think that Ollie Ricker talked more than any living woman. She took a vow, the day they got me, that she'd never speak an unnecessary word again in her life. I'll say she's kept that vow pretty well. I wish to God I'd taken the same vow, before I shot my mouth off about John, the other day."

"You don't think that I did it, then?" I wished John could have seemed less eager.

"On the square," Hubert answered, "I don't see who else could have done it. That makes no never minds. I wish I'd kept my mouth shut, on account of Sam—"

"Leave me out of it," Sam growled, "and forget it. Forget the whole d—n thing, if you can. I'm through. I'm a fool. I'm a d—n sight worse—I'm an old fool. A girl got killed on the Desert Moon ranch. A boy killed himself for love of her. The killer got clean away. So far as I'm concerned, it is going to rest there. I'm closing the book. Soon as I can, I'll sell out the d—n place, lock, stock and barrel."

"That doesn't go for me, dad," John said. "And I think you'll change your mind. I'm not willing to go on the rest of my life with half a dozen people thinking that I killed Gabrielle. No sir, not with one person thinking it. Here's another thing, dad. Danny honestly believes that, some way or other, you are mixed up in this thing. We can't marry, with a thing like that between us. I guess it doesn't make any difference in the way we feel toward each other; but it makes a barrier, just the same, that will have to come down before we marry."

"You think Danny is coming back here, then?" Hubert questioned.

"How do you mean? They read a telegram to me, not an hour ago, saying that she'd get in on number Twenty-one Friday afternoon."

"I'll bet she's not on it."

"Say, Hand—"

"Keep your shirt on, John. We all know that Danny is innocent of the crime, and that she is a good little scout— a lot better than Gaby was, if not half as charming and attractive. But—she knows more than she wishes to know. She knows more than she's going to tell. Maybe more than she can tell, in safety. For the love of Mike, folks—couldn't you see that she had some reason for working up that case against Sam? Cutting it out of whole cloth. If she'd been trying to shield John, do you think she'd have used Sam for that purpose? Not on your life she wouldn't have, she'd have pinned it on me, or Mrs. Ricker, or even on Mary. She did try to pin it on Chad—"

Mrs. Ricker came tottering into the room. Sam jumped to meet her, and helped her over to his own big chair at the head of the table.

She leaned forward, her long black-sleeved arms stretched straight in front of her over the white cloth, her hands clenched into fists.

"For hours," she said, "I have been trying to reach a decision. I have reached it. I have come here to confess."

"Before I came to the Desert Moon—" she began, but Hubert Hand stopped her.

"Never mind, Ollie. No need confessing as you say, any of that. Sam knows all about us. It is all right with him. I mean—he realizes it's all long past."

"Do you know all of our story?" Mrs. Ricker lifted her faded eyes to Sam.

Legal Enactments for Settling Public Lands

During the existence of the government under the Articles of Confederation, congress on September 6, 1780, passed a resolution recommending the survey and disposal by the several states of their waste and unappropriated lands to aid in paying the public debt incurred by the War of the Revolution. In the beginning these lands were regarded as an asset for the payment of this debt. The earliest efforts were to sell the land in large blocks and, prior to the organization of our present government, congress made three such sales. On June 15, 1785, congress under the Articles of Confederation passed a resolution forbidding settlement on the public domain. The act of March 3, 1807, prohibited such settlement under penalty of forfeiting any right or claim a settler may have, and the President was authorized to use civil and military force to remove such persons from the lands. Certain exceptions were made in favor of those who had settled there before the passage of the act, and later, for those who had settled before February 1, 1816, a privilege of temporary occupancy was given. From time to time acts were passed providing for the preemption rights within certain areas and subject to varying conditions.

Birds That Cannot Walk

All members of the swallow family are distinguished by their small, weak feet which are used only for clinging and perching purposes. They cannot walk or hop on the ground. These birds spend more of their time on the wing than other birds and they feed chiefly on insects which they catch while in flight. Even water is scooped from ponds by the birds on the wing. Barn swallows and purple martens are the most common species of this family in America.

"Bankrupt" Ancient Term

The origin of the word "bankrupt" is traced back to ancient times. A Hebraic custom required the deposit in the temple of certain sums of money in Hebraic currency. As Roman coins were frequently used, money changers set up their table or bench (bank) on which they kept Hebraic coins to be bought in Roman money. Money was also lent, and sometimes the changer found himself owing more than he owned. To prevent further calamity his creditors drove him from his business and broke his bench to pieces. He was then "bench broken" or bankrupt.

Message Undeciphered

The Sinai tablets, discovered seven or eight years ago near the base of Mount Sinai, have been only partially deciphered. They appear to be the complaint of Semitic laborers brought to work in the mines in that locality and addressed to the Goddess Hathor.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

COULDN'T FOOL SANTA

"Did I ever tell you," began Daddy, "just how wise Santa Claus is, and how one little boy almost fooled him—but didn't?"

They Were Empty.

"Please tell us!" exclaimed Nick and Nancy together.

"And I was the little boy," smiled Daddy, and the children laughed delightedly, as he continued:

"I had written a long letter to Santa Claus asking for skates, knee pads, a hockey stick and a pair of strong gloves. It was the day before Christmas and bedtime was such a long time coming.

"In fact I have never known the day to pass so slowly."

"We can understand that," chuckled Nick.

"I should say so!" exclaimed Nancy.

"I was ready to go to bed just as soon as I had my supper and my stockings had been hung up. Soon I fell asleep and had the most wonderful dreams.

"I thought I saw the reindeer, with Santa Claus driving them right over cities and towns, right over chimneys and roofs.

"Suddenly I woke up. It was still quite dark. 'Oh, dear,' I thought, 'it's not even time to get up. And I thought I wouldn't awake until morning.'

"Then I wondered if Santa had been here. I got out of bed, put on my wrapper and slippers and took a look look at my stockings. They were empty and then I thought that I couldn't have been asleep very long.

"As I was climbing back into a bed I heard a sound that came from the direction of the chimney.

"Then I heard sounds of feet stamping on the roof.

"'The reindeer,' I thought, so I hurried across the room to the fireplace and stood there, very still and not making a sound.

"I was afraid that my breathing could be heard. At last I heard a voice come down the chimney and it was saying 'I can't go on yet, my pretty reindeer.

"'There is a small boy down there who wants to have a look at us and you know we mustn't be seen by anybody.

"'We like to do our work and then go flying off again, don't we reindeer?'

"It must have been Santa who had been looking down the chimney and had seen me.

"Then I thought that he would be late on his rounds and that some boy or girl might miss their presents just because of me, delaying Santa Claus.

"I hurried back to bed.

"Then what noises and sounds I heard but before I knew it I was fast asleep again.

"When I awoke it was broad daylight. I jumped out of bed and dashed to the fireplace.

"My stockings were filled! Everything I had asked for was there and I was so happy.

"My Daddy said to me 'I heard many strange noises last night. They lasted for a long time.

"Then I Heard."

"'Sounded like a team of horses on the roof and then I heard a voice.' I didn't like to tell him that they were reindeer and that it was Santa's voice he had heard and that what he had heard was the reindeer becoming impatient because I was keeping them from doing their work.

"But I never did it again. It was a wonderful night—the most wonderful Christmas eve I had ever had, but I might have been the cause of some other boy or girl being overlooked.

"You would never do that, would you?" he asked the children.

"Never!" exclaimed Nick and Nancy.

Murder Will Out

A Scottish farmer, being elected to the school board visited the village school and tested the intelligence of the class by the question:

"Now, boys, can any of you tell me what naething is?"

After a moment's silence a small boy in the back seat rose.

"It's what ye gi'd me the other day for holding yer horse."
